

Aboriginal Crocodile Totem

Aboriginals and Torres Strait Islander people have totems. These are natural objects, plants or animals that each family member inherits as their spiritual emblem. They define each person's role and responsibility and their relationships with each other and creation.

One such totem is the crocodile. What would the crocodile represent if it were your totem? What sort of a person would you expect to have a crocodile as their totem?

Use the sample crocodile below to help decorate your own totem.
