

ANZAC BISCUITS - THE LAST ANZAC

The song, The Last ANZAC, was written by Melbourne teacher Michael Travers and is about Alec Campbell and his favourite saying 'Peace at home and peace to the world'. Use the Youtube video - <http://youtu.be/UdH9fvfxdE4> to teach this wonderful song to your students and hopefully one day we will all "join hands in peace".

The Last ANZAC

*Every year we remember, in April and November,
The boats on the water, carrying the brave.
They heard the deadly order, to run through the water,
It's time for you to jump boys, you're fighting to be free.*

*And with every year a passing,
Our nation's soul's been marching,
Through country towns and city streets, their memory lives on,
And when peaceful rays of sunlight, my face shine upon,
I'm feeling somehow different cos', the Last ANZAC's gone.*

*If we need to solve a problem, can we talk it through?
Cos' water looks much better, better when it's blue,
Remember the Last ANZAC, and how he cried for peace,
Forever under gum trees, blue skies over me.*

*I ask myself the question,
Time and time again,
The world is so much different,
But some things stay the same,
As we ride treacherous waters,
May our hearts calm the seas,
Will we hold the ANZAC courage,
And join our hands in peace?
And join our hands in peace?
And join our hearts in peace?*

(Point to yourself)
(Point to your wrist)
(Make a circle with both arms)
(Make a circle with both arms)
(Hands going over waves)
(Hands crossed on heart)
(Fists up)
(Join hands low or high)
(Join hands low or high)
(Hands low, lift up crossing to hold)
