

BRAUERY

At the very start of The Flying Angel, Sister Marie Eileen Craig says that she wants to be brave just like her father was when he fought in the Great War. Do you think that she succeeded in becoming brave? In the space below explain in your own words what it means to be brave and the ways in which Sister Craig was brave during the course of the story? Finish by detailing a time when you have been brave – it does not need to be as brave as fighting a war as bravery can be as small as removing a bug for someone else who is afraid of it. We are all brave sometimes.
